

RALF DAHRENDORF ROUNDTABLES SERIES

EUROPE'S DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION AND THE FUTURE OF WORK

Automation, digitalisation, and other forms of technological innovations are rapidly changing the fundamental nature of work. Managing this transition is an important challenge, amid a growing polarisation between high and low skill jobs, unemployment, and a mismatch between skills and jobs. During this event we will discuss the economic and societal implications of technological innovation for work and sound policies to prepare European labour markets for the future. How, and to what extent will technological changes revolutionise the labour markets? Who will benefit and who will face uncertainty? And how do we ensure that technological innovation continues to be a positive driver for economic growth and prosperity for all?
